PROMOTING COOPERATION AND IDENTIFICATION OF GOOD PRACTICES

22-23 May 2013, Nassau, The Bahamas

PANELIST PRESENTATION GUIDELINES

Protection of Victims of Trafficking and Other Vulnerable Groups within mixed migratory flows

Thursday, 23 May 2013, 11:00-12:30

CONTEXT:

While border control is essential for the purposes of combating international crime, including smuggling and trafficking, and averting security threats, protection safeguards are required to ensure that such measures are not applied in an indiscriminate or disproportionate manner and that they take into account the specific needs and rights of the different categories of persons involved in mixed migration, including asylum-seekers, refugees, trafficked persons, unaccompanied or separated children, women at risk and other vulnerable migrants. With regards to asylum-seekers and refugees, such measures should not lead to refoulement or the forced return of persons in need of international protection to territories where their lives or freedom would be threatened or at risk.

In this context, the establishment of a national functioning entry-system is an important element in any strategy relating to mixed movements. In response to the many challenges inherent in identifying and protecting refugees travelling with broader movements, in 2007, UNHCR developed a 10-Point Plan on Refugee Protection and Mixed Migration, that provides a number of practical tools and suggestions to assist States in developing and implementing protection-sensitive migration strategies, that is, strategies that take into account the needs of refugees and other specific vulnerable groups traveling within mixed flows.

As part of national responses to mixed migration management, appropriate reception arrangements for mixed arrivals are also needed to ensure that the basic human needs of people involved in mixed movements can be met, tailored according to their specific needs. Once new arrivals have been identified, an initial determination or screening needs to be made with regard to their profile and their specific protection needs. To this end, referral mechanisms and differentiated processes and procedures need to be put in place at arrival to ensure that the person's situation is met with the most appropriate response. These include differentiated procedures and processes for asylum-seekers and refugees, trafficked persons, unaccompanied or separated children, women at risk, other vulnerable migrants, and those seeking to migrate.

Globally, the sharing of experiences, challenges, and good practices in migration management can help stakeholders learn from similar experiences elsewhere and inspire their own legal, policy, and procedural responses to migration issues, in particular when dealing with vulnerable groups traveling within mixed migration flows.

As such, your country /agency is invited to present your experiences, challenges, and good practices regarding the protection of victims of trafficking, children and other vulnerable groups within mixed migration flows. To further guide the participants, a copy of the IOM-UNHCR Joint Screening Form for the identification of trafficked victims will be shared during the session. Though the session's agenda is still a work in progress, this panel session is scheduled for Thursday, 23 May.

PLEASE PREPARE A SHORT PRESENTATION ACCORDING TO THE FOLLOWING:

- Content should be structured to provide insight to the local context by describing answers to the following questions:
 - 1) What is your country or agency's mixed migration context: who are the vulnerable persons / groups that you encounter? What is their general profile (young/old, married/single, parent/no-children)? To what countries did they migrate and why? What happened to make them particularly vulnerable?
 - 2) The involvement of your Organization/Agency with the issue of mixed-migration and the protection of vulnerable categories traveling within mixed migration flows.
 - 3) Overview by your Organization/Agency of the international and regional legal framework in relation to the protection of trafficked persons, unaccompanied or separated children, women at risk and other vulnerable migrants involved in mixed migration flows.
 - 4) What are the existing legal, policy and operational mechanisms in place in your respective countries to identify and address the needs of victims of trafficking and other vulnerable groups arriving within mixed migration flows? (Is there a specific legal/policy/operational framework to prevent and combat human trafficking and smuggling in place? Are there any standards operational procedures or tools for the admission, identification, referral and counseling of vulnerable categories? What tools does your country/agency use to screen these persons to identify their category (victim of trafficking, unaccompanied minor, asylum seeker, etc.)? What tools does your country/agency use to assess these persons immediate needs and protection issues? Is there an adequate level of resources and expertise available?
 - 5) Which agencies or stakeholders have or can have primary responsibility for the various categories of vulnerable persons?

- 6) What kind of assistance is offered to and received by the persons who are identified as vulnerable and need of protection (shelter, food, clothing, counseling, medical care, referral to other service, including access to asylum procedures for persons in need of international protection)?
 - 7) What are the challenges in terms of coordination at national, bilateral and regional level? How has your country/agency coordinated this assistance among various local, national, or bilateral agencies? Are there multi-stakeholders or inter-institutional mechanisms established at entry points to deal with victims of trafficking, children, and other vulnerable groups arriving within mixed migration flows? Are there coordination systems at bilateral/regional level in place?
 - 8) What are the major challenges your country/agency experienced in protecting these vulnerable persons?
 - 9) How has your country/agency established some good practices positive developments or lessons learned at national or regional level to identify and protect these vulnerable persons? What good practices has your country/agency established?
- Presentations should be no more than 15 minutes. This time will be strictly enforced due to our tight schedule. We understand that 15 minutes is not enough time to describe answers to all of the questions above. Choose the questions that are most relevant to illustrate how your country/agency is responding given the local context. We also recognize that you may not have all of the information; therefore, we encourage you to contact counterparts in the various government agencies and civil society to gather their insight. As this is a public setting, please provide information that is not confidential.
